

PLANNING FOR YOUNG FAMILIES

When we are young and our "estates" are somewhat small, estate planning may seem to be a need that we can easily put off, but such is not the case. The care and guardianship of children and the disposition of our assets, no matter how minimal, are important considerations. An unexpected death may leave these issues to the State and its courts. Planning can assure that your wishes and not the court's will dictate how these matters are to be handled, and that your surviving spouse and children are properly provided for. Estate planning is for everyone.
